W. C. T. U. COLUMN

CONDUCTED BY MRS. M. L. HOBBS.

TOO TRUE.

"April showers bring May flowers; and November ballots bring December saloons. December saloons bring January jags, February feuds, March maimings, April agonies, May mockers, June jabbars, July jeopardies, August abominations, September scamps, October outlaws, November nightmares, and a host of evils too numerous to mention and too outrageous to license."

"The license voter presses the button and the saloon keeper does the rest."

"The rich and the poor, the high and the low, can all vote for license; but to the man of 'good moral character' only is the license granted. He is the highest one of them all. He keeps the largest share of the profits for himself, and the others must be content to accept the smaller portion. Man was created a little lower than the angels; but the license voter is a little lower than the saloon keeper whom he creates."

"He who upholds the saloon must needs be a little lower than the saloon."

"As the steel spurs are to the feet of the telegraph lineman, when he climbs the pole to adjust the wire, so is high license to the feet of the saloon keeper when he climbs the back of the license voter to adjust his conscience to his pocket book. The spur and the bribe both hold up the climber, but the bribe leaves the deeper scar."

These extracts are from George W. Norman's little 10 cent book on Practical Morality. I read the book when it first came out; I reread it this past week, and believe it should come again to the notice of our people, and many copies of the book be placed in the hands of the unconverted. It hits the nail every time; it hits hard; it cannot be gainsaid.—Ed. Phalanx.

Her True Spirit.

Mrs. Carrie Nation smashes pictures, mirrors, and beer and whisky bottles; but Carrie Nation is not moved by a spirit of destruction, of hatred, of malice, of revenge. No, but by a spirit of love and of sacrifice. She says, "If my poor life will give courage to these faint hearted Christians, if this seeming work of destruction will open the eyes of Kansas to the sight of perjured law enforcers, of a great state disgraced by disrespect of her laws, and the great destruction of morals, of souls, of manhood and womanhood and childhood—a destruction that is appalling—why may God strengthen my arm to the task!"

Then this sense of outraged justice and love, which is manifest in Carrie Nation's onslaught on the saloons, is to a less extent smoldering in tens of thousands of hearts, not only in Kansas but in all this broad land; and if it was once concentrated on its enemy, organized and put into operation, woe be to the rum traffic! Rivers of blood might flow, but in the end right would prevail and wrongs be outlawed, and the traffic in alcoholic poisons become a thing of the past.

The saloon-keeper in Indiana and the saloon-keeper in Kansas stand on a different plane. In Kansas, if there at all, he is there in direct opposition to law; in Indiana he is here by law, which he is bound to respect. The law which gives him a legal right to sell on certain days of the year, during certain hours out of the twenty-four, and to certain persons, he should be wise to respect, for to violate this law in any particular jeopardizes his safety and is a constant menace to him.

They whose duty it is to enforce law in Kansas and Indiana are under their oath of office, and in either State are perjured men unless their oath is solemnly considered and the law in either state enforced. Carrie Nation does not furnish an object lesson for Kansas only but for Indiana too, and for all the nation. Law must be respected. MARY E. BALCH.

TO A LITTLE ONE.

I know not whither thy dear steps are tending,
Dear, on life's thorny ways;
I see the morning not the twilight ending
Of thy sweet days.

I hear the music of thy merry laughter
Clear ringing over all;
I would not think that tears may come hereafter—
Yet, the bright tears will fall.

I fashion for thee an unclouded heaven
Of steadfast stars and sun;
I see thee sad, and sinning, and forgiven,
Where brave deeds should be done.

Yet for the end—to know it is forbidden;
In blindness, dear, I trust
Thou shalt find light to see the thorn-spears hidden
Under earth's daisied dust.

Light—light for thee, a future sky adorning—
Garlands and crowns of light!
Kissing thy curls I only say good morning,
And then—Good night! Good night!

—FRANK L. STANTON.

A Good Thing.

German Syrup is the special prescription of Dr. A. Boschee, a celebrated German physician, and is acknowledged to be one of the most fortunate discoveries in medicine. It quickly cures coughs, colds and all lung troubles of the severest nature, removing, as it does, the cause of the affliction and leaving the parts in a strong and healthy condition. It is not an experimental medicine, but has stood the test of years, giving satisfaction in every case, which its rapidly increasing sale every season confirms. Two million bottles sold annually. Boschee's German Syrup was introduced in the United States in 1868, and is now sold in every town and village in the civilized world. Three doses will relieve any ordinary cough. Price, 75 cts. ## The White Man's Burden in the Philippines.

A striking cartoon in a late issue of the Pioneer Press, the great daily of St. Paul, well illustrates the liquor crime in the Philippines. A poor native hut is shown, with a Catholic church in the background, while near the hut is a wagon, floating the American flag, and containing kegs of beer, and labled U. S. Beer. Staggering up the ladder leading to the door of the hut is a native with a keg of beer on his back, while looking out of one of the windows of the hut is a woman, probably the wife of the staggering native, with anguish as we suppose, depicted on her countenance. Underneath the whole are the words: "Taking up the first installment of the white man's burden."

Population of Germany.

BERLIN, Germany, Feb. 26.—The census taken Dec. 1, 1900, show the population of the empire to be 56,345,014, of which number 27,565,000 were males. Thirty-three of the largest towns have populations of over 100,000 each, or an aggregate of 9,108,814. Since 1895 the increase in the population has been about 4,000,000.

Black Knot of the Plum and Cherry.

Purdue University Experiment Station, Feb. 27, 1901.

The opinion is quite prevalent among farmers and many fruit growers, that the disease known as Black Knot, so often found upon plum and cherry trees, is caused by certain insects. It is true that we may often find upon cutting open these knots, the larvae of certain insects, but it is a universally recognized fact, among those who have given the matter careful attention, that these unsightly, knotty excrescences are due to a special fungus which is almost always confined to the plum and sour cherry. The insects are there, because they find these knots to be good breeding places.

The swellings are first noticed in early spring, often as soon as growth begins. They are then of a yellowish color, but get darker with age. In May and June, a crop of spores, which answer to seeds in higher plants, appears on the surface of the knots, resembling to the naked eye a soft downy covering. This soon disappears, when the knots continue to get darker until winter, when they have the characteristic black color, which makes them so conspicuous at this season of the year. If examined carefully late in the fall, the surface of the knot will be found to be covered with a great many minute pimples or elevations, each one of which is a fruit of the fungus in which the winter spores are contained. These are in turn distributed later on, and find a lodging place in the crotches of limbs and in the openings of the bark, and at the junctions of the annual growths. As these spores germinate they send their vegetative organs into the growing tissues of the branch causing swellings, which often extend along the branches four or five inches. These vegetative tissues do not all die during the winter, but some live over and so new swellings, at the edges of the old ones, may be seen the following year. In this way the branch may continue to be infested until finally it becomes completely surrounded, when the circulation is cut off and the branch dies. When these knots appear upon several branches at the same time, it is only a question of a very short time before the tree will die.

Treatment.—The treatment generally recommended is to cut off the knots and burn them, which is a good thing to do, if it is done before the winter spores have been distributed. If not, then some additional treatment will be necessary. It is recommended therefore, that all "knots" be cut off and burned during this month, (February) and in addition to this, spray the trees with a strong solution of Bordeaux mixture during the first warm days of spring. About the time that buds start, spray again with the ordinary strength Bordeaux mixture. This ought to destroy all of the winter spores. Then in case the branches may have been already infected the previous year, they should be sprayed again during the latter part of May and the first of June. The young knots may be destroyed by painting them with chloro-naphthol or with pure kerosene oil. Whenever these remedies are thoroughly applied, there will be no trouble in controlling the disease providing all old, worthless trees have been cut out and burned and provided also that all the people of the entire neighborhood co-operate in this plan of action. Wherever the Damson plum is grown this disease is almost sure to be present; and it is one of "injurious plant diseases" referred to in the Indiana inspection law. The necessity for prompt action on the part of all owners of infested trees, will be evident to all. J. TROOP, Horticulturist.

It is no bliss
To miss a kiss,
But, oh, 'tis bliss
To kiss a miss.

But sometimes,
After you have kissed her,
You wish to thunder
You had missed her.
